A large database of antiwar songs. The Internationale is known worldwide for being the most important combat song of the working class all over the world, but in its original French version and in many other versions and translations in other languages it includes at least one strongly antimilitarist stanza against bourgeois and imperialist war, which has impelled us to include it in our Antiwar Songs database. Moreover, the song was composed by Eugène Pottier to celebrate the Paris Commune, an episode very often mentioned in the Antiwar Songs. The anti-militarist stanza in Pottier's original lyrics was officially forb. This picture is a tribute to the best song ever written, which in my opinion, is Wish You Were Here by Pink Floyd. Here's why it is: So, so you think you can tell, heaven from hell, blue sky from pain, can you tell a green field, from a cold steel rail, a smile from a veil, do you think you can tell...Â If you ever get a hold of photoshop or similar, you should try to change the reflection of the glasses to something else - That would be really cool! Reply. Feb 21, 2009. Some anti-war songs lament some aspects of war, while others satirize war. Most promote peace in some form, while others sing out against specific armed conflicts. Still others depict the physical and psychological destruction that warfare causes to soldiers, innocent civilians, and humanity as a whole. Many of these songs are considered protest songs, and some have been embraced by war-weary people, various peace movements, and peace activists.
