“Lift Ev’ry Voice and Sing” often referred to as the Black national anthem is a song written as a poem by James Weldon Johnson (1871–1938) in 1900 and set to music by his brother John Rosamond Johnson (1873–1954) in 1905. “Lift Ev’ry Voice and Sing” was publicly performed first as a poem as part of Sing a song full of the faith that the dark past has taught us Sing a song full of the hope that the present has brought us Facing the rising sun of our new day begun, Let us march on till victory is won. Stony the road we trod Bitter the chast’ning rod, Felt in the days when hope unborn had died; Yet with a steady beat Have not our weary feet Come to the place for which our fathers sighed? This poem was written in 1900 for the celebration of Abraham Lincoln’s birthday at a segregated black school, and in particular to introduce Booker T. Washington at the time the most recognized black person in the country. Almost immediately, the audience recognized its power, and James’ brother John set it to music.
