Lightbox Productions in association with Neil McPherson for the Finborough Theatre presents

The first London production in over 50 years of the classic Ulster play

OVER THE BRIDGE

by Sam Thompson

"I sometimes compare people with a story my father used to tell me when I was a wee girl. About how they built a boat in the shipyard, how they started from her keel plate and built her up, riveting and welding her plates to a sound structure... And when she was finished, she'd sail down Belfast Lough and into the ocean to be lashed and buffeted by storms. But dad always said that he could be sure of one thing, she’d come through it all in one piece. Isn’t it a pity people couldn’t be like that?

Set in the Belfast Shipyard of the 1950s and against the backdrop of the IRA's Border Campaign, Sam Thompson’s seminal 1960 play is a powerful exposé of Ulster's sectarian bigotry and violence before the eruption of the Troubles.

Peter O'Boyle, a Catholic shipyard worker, has become the target of a vicious whispering campaign. Veteran Trade Unionist Davy Mitchell, a Protestant who has spent his life fighting for others’ right to work, is keen that the Union does what it can to protect him. As tensions mount and the union begins to split on sectarian lines, mob rule starts to take over...

First staged in Belfast in 1960, the play was produced against a backdrop of controversy when the Ulster Group Theatre withdrew it for being a play that ‘would give rise to sectarianism of an extreme nature’. Its original production, directed by James Ellis, and starring J. G. Devlin, Joseph Tomelty and Harry Towb, played to an audience of 42,000 people during the six-week run, far greater than had attended any play in Belfast previously. It was seen on tour in Dublin, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Brighton and the West End, and was adapted for both radio and television.

Described by The Irish Times as “a brickbat hurled violently against bigotry”, this Northern Irish classic continues to provoke uncomfortable questions about unity, tolerance and the rules we live by today.

Playwright Sam Thompson (1916-1965) was a seminal Northern Irish playwright, best known for his first play, Over the Bridge (1957). The play was first staged in Belfast in 1960, in the troubled aftermath of the Ulster Group Theatre's decision to withdraw it for production. The play went on to have runs in Dublin, Brighton and London. Thompson’s other plays include The Evangelist (1961) and the television play, Cemented with Love (1964). A draft of a further play, The Masquerade, set in London, was completed just before his death. Thompson wrote several plays for radio which were broadcast by the BBC including Brush in Hand (1956), Tommy Baxter, Shop Steward (1957), The General Foreman (1958), The Long Back Street (1959), The Fairmans: Life in a Belfast Working Family (1960–1). Thompson spent most of his working life as a painter in the Belfast shipyards, starting aged 14 at Harland and Wolff, and was an active trade unionist all of his life. He also ran for the Northern Ireland Labour Party in the 1964 General Election.

She is also a script reader for the National Theatre of Scotland and Tinderbox.

The Press on director Emma Faulkner
"Urgent ... and so well performed that it should not be missed” ★★★★★ Five Stars, WhatsOnStage on After the End
"Dennis Kelly's script is realized skillfully here ... an absorbing and sharply delivered exploration of human behaviour pushed to extremes” ★★★★ Four Stars, The Independent on After the End
“A fine production” ★★★★ Four Stars, The Scotsman on After the End
“A tense intriguing debate ... immaculately performed” ★★★★ Four Stars, The Scotsman on Forfeit
“A pleasure... Faulkner has polished it up nicely, too...sustaining the serio-comic mood right up to the hilariously blithe, cynical ending,” The Times on The Ruffian on the Stair
“Worth crossing London to see.. played with such finesse” British Theatre Guide on The Ruffian on the Stair

Cultural commentators on Over The Bridge and playwright Sam Thompson
"At last the unclean spirit of sectarianism had been dragged before the floodlights and examined with passion, pity and corrosive laughter” Sam Hanna Bell in Causeway: The Arts in Ulster
"A landmark in the cultural history of Northern Ireland and ... prophetic of the Troubles to follow;” James McAleavey in Irish Playwrights, 1880-1995: A Research and Production Sourcebook
"A powerful indictment of the failure of labour politics against religious fundamentalism." Lance Pettitt in Screening Ireland: Film and Television Representation"
"Sam Thompson changed the face of Ulster theatre and influenced later playwrights...It is a mark of Sam Thompson's importance to Northern Irish drama that everything he wrote caused frissons of alarm among the sensitive members of our ruling class.’ John Keyes
