Cognition and Emotion

From Order to Disorder

Second Edition

Mick Power and Tim Dalgleish
Contents

PREFACE TO SECOND EDITION

1 Introduction

| Preliminary observations | 2 |
| Emotion                 | 6 |
| The cognitive approach in psychology | 8 |
| Summary of the aims of this book | 9 |

Part 1

Philosophy and theory

2 The cognitive philosophy of emotion

| Some initial questions for the aspiring emotion theorist | 17 |
| Early theories of emotion: the Greek philosophers | 19 |
| The Platonic model of emotion | 20 |
| The development of the feeling theory of emotions: René Descartes | 21 |
| The psychologising of feeling theory: William James | 26 |
| The behaviourist theory of emotions | 29 |
CONTENTS

The development of the cognitive account of emotions:
  Aristotle, Aquinas, and Spinoza 33
Twentieth-century cognitive accounts of emotion 41
Summary and conclusions 46

3 Cognitive theories of emotion 57
  Categorical versus dimensional approaches to emotion 60
  Network theories 73
  Appraisal theories 82
  Summary 96

4 Cognitive theories of emotional disorder 101
  Seligman's learned helplessness theory 103
  Beck's cognitive therapy 107
  Williams, Watts, MacLeod, and Mathews (1988, 1997) 113
  Teasdale and Barnard (1993) 115
  Social–cognitive theories 119
  Miscellaneous theories 122
  Summary 124

5 Towards an integrated cognitive theory of emotion: the SPAARS approach 129
  The picture so far 130
  Some theoretical remarks concerning a theory of mind 135
  The format of mental representations 140
  Emotion generation via schematic models 146
  Additional constraints and processes within SPAARS 158
  A note on complex emotions 166
  Conclusions 167

Part 2

Basic emotions and their disorders 169

6 Fear 171
  Normal fear and anxiety 172
CONTENTS

Disordered fear and anxiety 177
Panic 180
Generalised anxiety and worry 189
Post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) 201
Phobias and obsessions 218
Conclusions 220

7 Sadness 221
Sadness: some theoretical considerations 226
Combinations of sadness and other basic emotions 228
Grief 230
Depression 235
Postnatal depression 254
Other affective disorders 256
Further comments and conclusions 256

8 Anger 259
The moral nature of anger 261
Events, agents, interpretations, and appraisals involved in anger 261
Other factors contributing to the experience of anger 264
Too much anger versus too little 268
Theories of anger 271
The relationship of anger to other emotions 283
Anger disorder 287
Concluding remarks 292

9 Disgust 293
Some theoretical comments 297
Complex emotions derived from disgust 301
Disorders of disgust 304
Summary and conclusions 318
CONTENTS

10 Happiness 321
Joy and other circumscribed positive emotions 324
Traditional approaches to the study of happiness 325
Towards a theoretical account of happiness 329
The repressive coping style 337
Emotional states related to happiness 342
Happiness order and happiness disorder 347
Concluding remarks 352

11 Overview and conclusions 353
Summary of the SPAARS model 355
Meta-emotional skills and representations 366
Therapeutic implications 367
Final comments on SPAARS 374

REFERENCES 375
AUTHOR INDEX 421
SUBJECT INDEX 435
Cognition & Emotion is devoted to the study of emotion, especially of those aspects of emotion that are related to mental processes. Examples of topics appropriate for the journal include emotional appraisals; effects of mood or emotion on cognition and motivation; the nature of emotional experience; self-regulation of emotion; social, historical, or cultural aspects of emotion; and the nature of particular emotions or emotionality in general. Part 1, An Orientation about Emotion considers some main views about it and argues that there is no necessary opposition between cognition and emotion, that a particular and personal emotion is always also a more. An essay of 7,350 words. We examined whether differential self-perception influences the salience of emotional stimuli in depressive disorders, using a perceptual matching task in which geometric shapes were arbitrarily assigned to the self and an unknown other. more.