Respect is earned and is never just given. BUT, you must give respect to receive respect. Meaning when you interact with an individual you treat them with dignity and in a respectful manner as this shows your character as a person. And the respect will be reciprocated. You must always behave in a respectful manner as this reflects on you, your character, integrity and values of who you are as a person. No one owes you respect until you have earned it, so there is no such thing as I will give it after they give it to me first. Respect, also called esteem, is a positive feeling or action shown towards someone or something considered important, or held in high esteem or regard. It conveys a sense of admiration for good or valuable qualities. And it is also the process of honoring someone by exhibiting care, concern, or consideration for their needs or feelings. Some people may earn the respect of individuals by assisting others or by playing important social roles. In many cultures, individuals are considered to be worthy of respect definition: If you respect others, you have a good opinion of their character or ideas. | Meaning, pronunciation, translations and examples. Word forms: 3rd person singular present tense respects, present participle respecting, past tense, past participle respected. 1. verb. If you respect someone, you have a good opinion of their character or ideas. I want him to respect me as a career woman. [VERB noun]. He needs the advice of people he respects, and he respects you. [VERB noun].
